ABOUT STUDENT INVOLVEMENT

Greetings Bobcats!

Welcome to clubs and organizations within the Office of Student Involvement at UC Merced! We have designed this viewbook to be a comprehensive guide for interest groups, recognized student organizations to provide information about their organizations such as founding date, dues, fun facts and annual events hosted by the club and organizations.

At UC Merced, we place students at the heart of the educational process. We believe that learning and development occur inside and outside of the classroom. In nurturing student learning and development, intellectual, spiritual, social, emotional, and physical—we consider student organizations to be vital partners in the process. UC Merced provides an abundance of opportunities for student leadership and campus involvement along with University resources and services to support those efforts. Student Involvement Office serves as the primary liaison between student organizations and UC Merced.

The Office of Student Involvement is committed to building a sense of belonging and school spirit by helping students explore ways to get involved on campus, develop new leadership skills, and engage in meaningful experiences that will prepare them for the opportunities of tomorrow. The Student Involvement team is dedicated to a holistic student experience. By participating in a variety of campus programs and events, students will be able to demonstrate growth in the following four core competencies:

BENEFITS OF JOINING A STUDENT CLUB AND ORGANIZATION!

1. You'll learn more about yourself.

Joining a student organization presents many opportunities to learn more about yourself, your goals, and your strengths. You can learn from how other students handle certain situations and test your current knowledge. You can also find out what you're good at, whether that's multitasking, staying organized, generating ideas, or serving others. This self-awareness will be beneficial in your future career.

2. You'll develop soft skills.

Soft skills are essentially "people skills" — they're the skills that allow us to effectively interact with others, like communication, attitude, and work ethic. Participating in a student organization not only teaches you these skills, but also helps you broaden and improve those you already have. You'll learn the best way to communicate with both individuals and large groups, and you'll gain emotional intelligence as you develop new relationships.

3. You'll learn how to work with a team.

Knowing how to work well with a team is an essential skill for any career. Being in a student organization teaches you how to do this by putting you in situations where you are required to take advice from others, as well as give your own. Joining a student organization helps to build your network & can provide valuable skills #BobcatSkills

4. You'll get networking opportunities.

Another great benefit of student organizations (and graduate programs as a whole) is that you get the opportunity to network. Meeting new students, making connections, and building relationships will all help down the line when you're looking for a job. Because you're all part of the same organization, you know the people you're meeting have at least a few of the same interests as you, so their connections will be valuable.

5. You'll gain practical experience in a safe environment.

Participating in a club or an organization based around your particular area of study will give you practical experience within that field. And what's great about student clubs is that while you learn to use skills like project management, event planning, and fundraising, you get to test them out in a safe environment where making mistakes is OK. Everyone is there to support you, so there's no fear in messing up or being wrong.

BENEFITS OF JOINING A STUDENT CLUB AND ORGANIZATION!

6. You'll be able to use the skills you've learned in class.

As business students, you are able to apply classroom experience in your student organizations, and also develop leadership and life skills that help you become more effective in classroom team projects.

7. You'll learn how to engage with diverse groups of people.

Chances are, the organization you choose to participate in will include a diverse group of people — you'll be faced with the same situation in the working world! Learning how different people respond and react to certain situations will help you develop your skills in presenting and implementing ideas. Corbett said student organizations can also provide you with the opportunity to learn about different cultural backgrounds.

8. You'll gain leadership skills.

Becoming a leader or an officer in an organization will help you develop leadership skills that will be invaluable in all areas of life. You'll be presented with opportunities to improve in public speaking, and gain confidence in yourself as an individual.

9. You'll get a break from your studies.

Concentrating on schoolwork is obviously important during a graduate program, but giving your mind a break is necessary (and beneficial). While taking part in club activities, you'll be able to socialize with like-minded individuals and actually learn as much from them as you would your schoolwork.

10. You'll expand your resume.

There's no arguing that organizations and activities look good on a résumé. Showing employers that you participated in, or (better yet) lead, a student organization, they'll know that you're hard working and can handle multiple responsibilities.

11. You'll be able to give back to the community.

Many student organizations provide opportunities to give back to the community, whether through acts of service, sponsoring events, or hosting charity drives. Not only is this good for society, but it will teach you how a future business can give back, too.

12. You'll have fun!

Another simple reason to join a student organization is to have fun. Meeting new people, making new friends, and participating in activities will help you make the most of your graduate school experience.
